DOMESTIC RELATIONS LAW UNDER THE NEW BANKRUPTCY CODE

Bankruptcy law radically changed on October 17, 2005. Now, any attorney talking to any client regarding bankruptcy — even just to discuss the basics — may be subject to liability. The law effectively makes any attorney mentioning "bankruptcy" a debt relief agent. This provision of the new law affects all attorneys. Domestic relations attorneys need to be aware of the changes and how they specifically affect the domestic relations practice. Domestic relations practitioners and creditor rights practitioners may not want to even file Proofs of Claim in bankruptcy court because of the new restrictions. This CLE is designed to give non-bankruptcy practitioners information specific to their practice to help avoid the pitfalls and potential liability of the new code.

CHERYL K. COPPERSTONE was the Staff Attorney for the Chapter 13 Trustee for five years for Southern Arizona and has practiced bankruptcy law for 10 years. She is an attorney with Allen & Copperstone, P.L.L.C.

RONALD N. ALLEN has practiced law in Tucson, Arizona for 23 years. His practice emphasis is in bankruptcy and debtors' rights, and domestic relations litigation. He has taught several seminars on topics involving both bankruptcy law and domestic law issues, as well as consumer bankruptcy issues.
